When lessons were over, he told the children in the school all about the old man's hat.

Then he went to his desk and took out a pretty picture-book, which he gave to the little girl for her kindness.

Inside the cover her name was written, and beneath it this frustration he began to shout , "ill fight anyone who will tilt down with me!" nobody did。 but the next day people kidded him by saying it was the first time any fighter was urged to take a dive even before the bout began。

i now know he participated in some things vicariously through me , his only son。 when i played ball (poorly) , he "played" too。 when i joined the navy he "joined" too。 and when i came home on leave , he saw to it that "i visited his office。 introducing me , he was really saying , "this is my son , but it is also me , and i could have done this , too , if things had been different。 " the words were never said aloud。 he has been gone many years now , but i think of him often。 i wonder if he had my reluctance to be with him during our walks。 if he did , i am sorry i never told him how sorry i was , how unworthy i was , how i regretted it。 i think of him when i complain about trifles , when i am envious of another's good fortune , when I don't have a "good heart".

at such times I put my hand on his arm to regain my balance , and say , "you take the pace , I will try to adjust to you. "
